Background

York County's 2020 Economic Action Plan identified the lack of quality, reliable and affordable childcare as a major barrier to attracting and retaining a stable workforce. In 2022, employers struggle to fill vacant positions in a highly competitive marketplace while childcare centers are closing due to their inability to hire staff. From March 2020 to April 2022 enrollment at local childcare facilities dropped by 1,647 children, a decrease of almost 20%.

The primary challenge is the low wages typical in the early childhood industry that makes it difficult to attract and retain qualified staff. The average childcare teacher earns $10 per hour and are responsible not only for keeping children safe but also for helping them develop and be ready for kindergarten. Childcare centers have difficulty raising salaries because they know that there is a limit to how much families can afford to pay.

In 2021 the local members of the Pennsylvania Early Learning Investment Commission (ELIC) initiated a program to provide an earnings supplement to Early Childhood teachers, administrators, and staff. The program is modeled similar to a state program which was discontinued in 2019.

The goal is to provide financial incentives for teachers to not only remain in the childcare industry but also to advance their education, so we continue to build high-quality childcare programs. In the first round of educator awards, 63 childcare programs participated and over $460,000 was awarded to childcare staff. Data is being gathered to evaluate the impact of the awards have on a variety of metrics including teacher retention.

An oversight committee has been established to develop and manage the program and includes Pete Brubaker, Tony Campisi and Kevin Schreiber from the ELIC along with representatives from the York County Community Foundation which serves as the fiscal sponsor, the United Way of York County, and childcare providers. Child Care Consultants administers the program at no charge.

In the first round of educator awards, 63 childcare programs participated and over $460,000 was awarded to 311 childcare staff.

SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES

Every child is unique, and those impacted by the ECE Educator Awards are no different. Early care and school age care programs provide quality care to a variety of children and family needs. A significant portion of families receive financial assistance such as Child Care Works in order to bear the cost of quality childcare. Over one-fourth of children impacted by the ECE Awards live in a non-traditional household with a single parent or grandparent, in foster care, or even experience homelessness. Many classrooms include children whose primary language is not English. Still others receive Individualized Family Support Plan (IFSP) or Individualized Education Plan (IEP) from support specialists.

COMPARED: 2019-20 ERA vs 2022 ECE Award

The 2022 York County Early Childhood Educator Awards were based on the previous Education Retention Awards (ERAs) granted by the Pennsylvania Office of Child Development and Early Learning (OCDEL). Individual award amounts and most eligibility requirements were the same for both awards. In FY 2019-2020, OCDEL awarded $470,758 in ERAs to eligible educators compared to $458,862 awarded by the York County Early Learning Investment Commission in 2022. The award amounts granted to eligible educators based on program STAR level are shown below.

Early care and school age care programs designated at STAR 2, 3, or 4 were encouraged to apply on behalf of eligible staff for both awards, as appropriate.

52 programs submitted approved ERA applications previously, while 63 programs submitted approved ELIC applications.

Of those eligible early care and school age care programs, 293 educators received Education Retention Awards in 2019-2020. In 2022, 311 educators received Early Childhood Educator Awards. The number of awards granted per STAR level are shown to the right.

Both ERAs and ECE Educator Awards are intended to reward highly qualified educators who have attained degrees, credentials, and/or credit-based professional development related to child development. Qualifying education levels include completing 9 or more ECE credits, holding a Child Development Associate (CDA) credential, or achieving an associate, bachelor's, or master's degree in ECE or a related field. Of the 293 and 311 total awards granted for each type, the education level data can be seen above.
